AliExpress

Aliexpress is owned by the Alibaba Group, a huge fucking online shopping and e-commerce company. Aliexpress has very strong buyer protection and it is normal for sellers to shut down their stores if they get too many bad reviews. Most buyers on the site are from Eastern Europe because Russia is like Amazon. The Aliexpress review system is terrible and Trulli, while not the Chinese equivalent of eBay, Reviews on Aliexpress don't mean too much as Chinese sellers can just buy reviews and people will leave 5-star reviews just for getting the item in the mail.

Taobao.com is Taobao's international version. Compared to Chinese Taobao, the whole site is in English and all the products are in Chinese name. Most of the time you need to agent to buy things from Taobao and ship them to your country but it is possible to get international shipping from Taobao. You always have to pay for shipping and shipping costs are usually higher than Aliexpress. Sellers will ship your goods to a factory and they either pay the factory to ship it to your country or send it to you. Taobao is almost always used for ear gear or counterfeited replica clothing.

Gearbest

A relatively new (established 2014) technology-focused shopping site. Advantages toward using Gearbest are to buy their products on their website. 50 points equals 1 USD. The point system rewards buyers who leave reviews. Gearbest also has a "no return" policy (you can't return products) so take the reviews with a grain of rice. Gearbest offers "shipping insurance" which is useless if you just use Paypal. Gearbest only receives products from China. They sell mostly electronic items like clothes and shoes but they're garbage-tier. Gearbest owns warehouses in Spain, the US, Hong Kong and the EU.

eBay

Ebay was originally made for collectors and a way for ordinary people to sell off old items. This is still the case, especially C2C, or consumer-to-consumer commerce. It eventually grew to sell everything and adopted to business-to-consumer sales. Ebay isn't the best place to get typical Chinese goods at the lowest prices but is widely used by thousands of vendors and provides a large catalogue.

DHgate.com Dihgate doesn't bother removing copyrighted items so Dihgate is also pretty much the bottom of the barrel for most fakes, don't expect those $30 shoes to be anywhere close to the real deal. Some higher-end replica sellers use Dihgate as a marketplace but have unlisted or misleading stores.
